

Dear Friend of AVTECH!

On June 1st, AVTECH completed our Webinar on Aventus SIGMA, a brand new service bringing live weather alerts to the cockpit.

The event was a great success, with more than 40 airlines attending, and I am thrilled about the immense interest for SIGMA.

As mentioned in the Webinar, SIGMA uses the aircraft FMS to determine active route and actual performance, and then retrieves tailored and specific weather alerts for each individual flight which is subsequently sent via ACARS to the cockpit.

AVTECH's focus is to bring the best weather available directly to the end user, the pilot, and with cooperation with Met Office (UK) we allow any airline to get access to the best weather in the market.

Did you miss out on the Webinar? Want to go back and review it again? No problem, a recorded version is available at <http://www.aircraftit.com/Operations/Vendors/Aventus.aspx>, and will be so for some time ahead.

AVTECH is bringing Aventus SIGMA to the market with an ambition to deliver a superior service for all its customers.

We have established a genuine knowledge in live distribution via ACARS and have to date documented more than 3 500 000 uplinks with our AVENTUS NowCast™ wind up-link service. A number that will rapidly increase as easyJet, one of Europe's leading airlines, is introducing Aventus NowCast™ to their fleet.

By combining the documented Fuel Saving capabilities of Aventus NowCast™ and SIGMA weather alerts into a Aventus SIGMA weather alert service, we can offer one of the strongest business cases in the market.

SIGMA is currently running in our in-house test environment, where the final details are being finished. We expect to launch the service with a few major European airlines sometime in June, and intend to keep you updated through our Newsletter.

Even though we expect to deliver a service of the highest industry standard already from the start, we are also looking for the best solution to any operational environment.

We at AVTECH believe our customers know what they want, and in order to meet that demand, we are focusing on the actual needs.

Therefore, we are looking for 2-4 additional airlines, ideally with different geographical location and with a variety of operations (Long- and Short haul) to join up in our dedicated development schedule.

Is your airline interested to be a part of AVTECH's development group? Please feel free to contact sales@avtech.aero, and one of our representatives will get back to you to discuss how we can work together!

If there is a turbulent season coming up, SIGMA is the tool you want to avoid the bumps!
